Charlemagne
King of the Franks and Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire

742 - 814

> “He was six feet four inches tall, and built to scale.
> He had beautiful white hair, animated eyes, a powerful nose...
> a presence "always stately and dignified." He was temperate > in eating and drinking, abominated drunkenness, and kept > in good health despite every exposure and hardship.”
> —Einhard (the King's secretary) describing Charlemagne

Charlemagne (English: Charles the Great, Dutch: Karel de Grote, German: Karl der Grosse, Latin: Carolus Magnus) was born on April 2, 742 in Northern Europe. Charles was the eldest son of Pippin III and Bertrada of Laon. "By the sword and the cross," Charlemagne became master of Western Europe.

In 768, when Charlemagne was 26, he and his younger brother Carloman inherited the kingdom of the Franks. In 771 Carloman died, and Charlemagne became sole ruler of the kingdom. At that time the Franks were falling back into barbarian ways, neglecting their education and religion. The Saxons of northern Europe were still pagans. In the south, the Roman Catholic church was asserting its power to recover land confiscated by the Lombard kingdom of Italy. Europe was in turmoil.

Charlemagne was determined to strengthen his realm and to bring order to Europe. In 772 he launched a 30-year military campaign to accomplish this objective. By 800 Charlemagne was the undisputed ruler of Western Europe. His vast realm encompassed what are now France, Switzerland, Belgium, and The Netherlands. It included half of present-day Italy and Germany, and parts of Austria and Spain. By establishing a central government over Western Europe, Charlemagne restored much of the unity of the old Roman Empire and paved the way for the development of modern Europe.

On Christmas Day in 800, while Charlemagne knelt in prayer in Saint Peter's in Rome, Pope Leo III placed a golden crown on the bowed head of the king. Charlemagne is said to have been surprised by the coronation, declaring that he would not have come into the church had he known the pope's plan. However, some historians say the pope would not have dared to act without Charlemagne's knowledge.

Charlemagne learned to read Latin and some Greek but apparently did not master writing. At meals, instead of having jesters perform, he listened to visiting scholars read from learned works. Charlemagne believed that government should be for the benefit of the governed. He was a reformer who tried to improve his subject's lives. He set up money standards to encourage commerce and urged better farming methods.

"By the sword and the cross," Charlemagne became master of Western Europe

As is often the case, people considered great by historians are great killers as well. Throughout his conquests, Charlemagne was responsible for the death of masses of people who refused to accept Christianity, or their new king. Choosing to keep faith with their old gods and leaders, many thousands were slaughtered.

Louis the Pious

Louis the Pious (also known as Louis I, Louis the Fair and Louis the Debonaire, German form: Ludwig der Fromme, French form: Louis le Pieux or Louis le Débonnaire, Spanish form: Ludovico Pío) (April 16, 778 - June 20, 840) was Emperor and King of the Franks from 814 to 840.

Born in Casseuil-sur-Garonne, in today's Gironde, France, the second son of Charlemagne, Louis was crowned king of Aquitaine as a child and sent there with regents and a court to rule in order to quiet rebellions which were forming after Charlemagne's defeat by the Moors in Spain.

When Charlemagne's other sons Pepin (810) and Charles (811) died, he was crowned co-emperor with Charlemagne in 813. On his father's death in 814, he inherited the entire Frankish kingdom and all its possessions. He was crowned emperor by Pope Stephen V in Reims in 816. Louis used Benedict of Aniane, a Septimanian Visigothic nobleman and monastic founder to help him reform the Frankish church. One of Benedict's primary reforms was to ensure that all religious houses in Louis' realm adhered to the Rule of St Benedict, named for its creator, Benedict of Nursia (AD 480-550).

Like most Frankish men Louis, who was the second son of Charlemagne, expected to share his inheritance with his brothers Charles the Younger and Pepin. However, both of them died before he did - Charles in battle and Pepin subsequent to his blinding and confinement after joining in a revolt against his father - and Louis inherited the Frankish empire intact.

Louis laid out plans to divide his empire between his three sons from his first marriage with Ermengarde: Lothar (who received the title of co-emperor), Pippin of Aquitaine and Louis the German. He then remarried with Judith of Bavaria and had a fourth son, Charles the Bald. The redivision of the empire to take Charles into account caused his older sons to revolt in 822. After a settlement, Lothar rebelled again in 830. This pattern continued until Louis' death in 840.

After the Battle of Fontenay (841) and the Oath of Strasbourg, the dispute was only settled with the Treaty of Verdun (843) which split the Frankish realm into three parts, the kernels of later France and Germany.

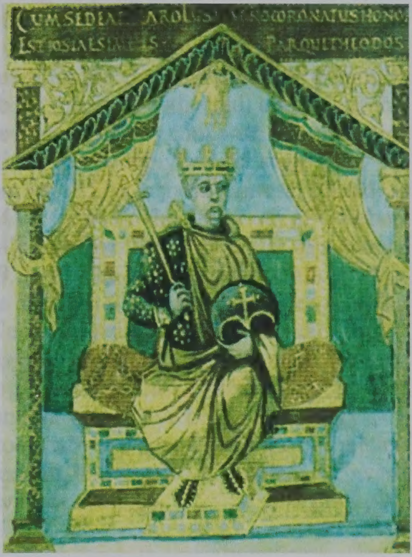
Executive summary: King of France, Holy Roman Emperor



Charles II, called Charles the Bald, King of France and Holy Roman Emperor, was the son of the emperor Louis the Pious and of his second wife Judith and was born in 823. The attempts made by his father to assign him a kingdom, first Alamannia (829), then the country between the Meuse and the Pyrenees (839), at the expense of his half-brothers Lothair and Louis led to a rising on the part of these two. The death of the emperor in 840 was the sign for the outbreak of war between his sons. Charles allied himself with his brother Louis the German to resist the pretensions of the emperor Lothair, and the two allies conquered him in the bloody victory o Fontenoy-en-Puisaye (25 June 841). In the following year, the two brothers confirmed their alliance by the celebrated oaths of Strassburg, made by Charles in the Teutonic language spoken by the subjects o Louis, and by Louis in the Romance tongue of Charles's subjects. The war was brought to an end by th treaty of Verdun (August 843), which gave to Charles the Bald the kingdom of the western Franks, wh practically corresponded with what is now France, as far as the Meuse, the Sane and the Rhone, with t addition of the Spanish March as far as the Ebro. The first years of his reign up to the death of Lothair (855) were comparatively peaceful, and during them was continued the system of confraternal government of the sons of Louis the Pious, who had various meetings with one another, at Coblenz (84 at Meersen (851), and at Attigny (854). In 858 Louis the German, summoned by the disaffected nobles invaded the kingdom of Charles, who fled to Burgundy, and was only saved by the help of the bishops and by the fidelity of the family of the Welfs, who were related to Judith. In 860 he in his turn tried to seize the kingdom of his nephew, Charles of Provence, but met with a repulse. On the death of Lothair in 869 he tried to seize his dominions, but by the treaty of Mersen (870) was compelled to share them with Louis the German. Besides this, Charles had to struggle against the incessant rebellions in Aquita against the Bretons, whose revolt was led by their chief Nomenoé and Erispoé, and who inflicted on th king the defeats of Ballon (845) and Juvardeil (851), and especially against the Normans, who devastat the country in the north of Gaul, the valleys of the Seine and Loire, and even up to the borders of Aquitaine. Charles was several times compelled to purchase their retreat at a heavy price. He has been accused of being incapable of resisting them, but we must take into account the unwillingness of the nobles, who continually refused to join the royal army; moreover, the Frankish army does not seem to have been sufficiently accustomed to war to make any headway against the pirates. At any rate, Charle led various expeditions against the invaders, and tried to put a barrier in their way by having fortified bridges built over all the rivers. In 875, after the death of the emperor Louis II, Charles the Bald, supported by Pope John VIII, descended into Italy, receiving the royal crown at Pavia and the imperial crown at Rome (29th December). But Louis the German, who was also a candidate for the succession Louis II, revenged himself for Charles's success by invading and devastating his dominions. Charles w recalled to Gaul, and after the death of Louis the German (28th August 876), in his turn made an attem to seize his kingdom, but at Andernach met with a shameful defeat (8th October 876). In the meantime John VIII, who was menaced by the Saracens, was continually urging him to come to Italy, and Charle after having taken at Quierzy the necessary measures for safeguarding the government of his dominion in his absence, again crossed the Alps, but this expedition had been received with small enthusiasm by nobles, and even by Boso, Charles's brother-in-law, who had been entrusted by him with the governme of Lombardy, and they refused to come with their men to join the imperial army. At the same time Carloman, son of Louis the German, entered northern Italy. Charles, ill and in great distress, started on his way back to Gaul, and died while crossing the pass of the Mont Cenis on the 5th or 6th of October 877. He was succeeded by his son Louis the Stammerer, the child of Ermentrude, daughter of a count Orleans, whom he had married in 842, and who had died in 869. In 870 he had married Richilde, who was descended from a noble family of Lorraine, but none of the children whom he had by her played a part of any importance. Charles seems to have been a prince of education and letters, a friend of the church, and conscious of the support he could find in the episcopate against his unruly nobles, for he chose his councillors for preference from among the higher clergy, as in the case of Guenelon of Sens, who betrayed him, or of Hincmar of Reims. But his character and his reign have been judged very variously. The general tendency seems to have been to accept too easily the accounts of the chroniclers the east Frankish kingdom, which are favorable to Louis the German, and to accuse Charles of coward and bad faith. He seems on the contrary not to have lacked activity or decision.

Charles the Bald - Detail from a painting in the First Bible of Charles the Bald, painted ca. 845-851, kept at the National Library of France

Charles the Bald (Charles I of France and Holy Roman Emperor Charles II) (823-877), Holy Roman Emperor and king of the West Franks, was the son of the emperor Louis the Pious and his second wife Judith. He was born when his elder brothers were already adults who had been assigned their own regna, or subkingdoms, by their father. The attempts made by Louis the Pious to assign Charles a kingdom, first Alemannia (829), then the country between the Meuse and the Pyrenees (839), at the expense of his half-brothers Lothair and Louis led to a rising on the part of these two against the emperor.

The death of the emperor in 840 was the signal for the outbreak of war between his sons. Charles allied himself with his brother Louis the German to resist the pretensions of the emperor Lothar, and the two allies conquered him at Fontenoy-en-Puisaye on 25 June 841. In the following year, the two brothers confirmed their alliance by the celebrated oaths of Strassburg. The war was brought to an end by the treaty of Verdun in August 843. The settlement gave Charles the Bald the kingdom of the western Franks, which practically corresponded with what is now France, as far as the Meuse, the Rhone, with the addition of the Spanish March as far as the Ebro.

The first years of Charles' reign, up to the death of Lothar I in 855, were comparatively peaceful, and during them was continued the system of "confraternal government" of the sons of Louis the Pious, who had various meetings with one another, at Koblenz (848), at Meerssen (851), and at Attigny (854). In 858, Louis the German, summoned by disaffected nobles to oust Charles, invaded the western Frankish kingdom. Charles' reign was so unpopular that he was unable to summon an army, and he fled to Burgundy.

He was saved only by the help of the bishops, who refused to crown Louis king, and by the fidelity of the Welfs, who were related to his mother, Judith. In 860 he in his turn tried to seize the kingdom of his nephew, Charles of Provence, but met with a repulse. On the death of his nephew Lothar II in 869, Charles tried to seize Lothar's dominions, but by the treaty of Meerssen (870) was compelled to share them with Louis the German.

Besides these family disputes, Charles had to struggle against the incessant rebellions in Aquitaine and against the Bretons. Led by their chiefs Nomenoë and Erispoë, who inflicted on the king the defeats of Ballon (845) and Juvardeil (851), the Bretons were somewhat successful. Charles also fought against the Normans, who devastated the country in the north of Gaul, the valleys of the Seine and Loire, and even up to the borders of Aquitaine. Charles was several times compelled to purchase their retreat at a heavy price. Charles led various expeditions against the invaders, and tried to put a barrier in their way by having fortified bridges built over all the rivers.

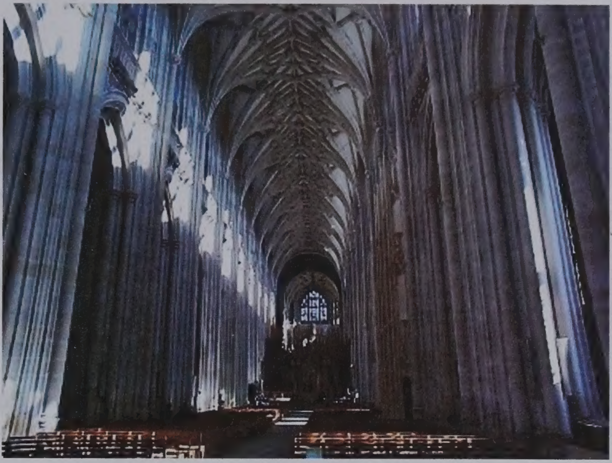
Winchester Cathedral - Winchester

In 635AD, Cynegils, King of the West Saxons, was baptised by St. Birinus, who was spreading the Christian message to parts of Britain which had not been reached by St. Augustine's first mission. Cynegil's son, Cenwalh, built a minster church in the centre of his kingdom, at Wintanceaster around 643. By 670, the modern day Winchester had become the royal and ecclesiastical centre of Wessex, remaining a city of prime importance at least until the Norman invasion.

Many of the subsequent kings of Wessex and later of all England, were buried here, including the energetic unifier, Alfred the Great in 899. Their bones were later moved to the new Minster and then into the present cathedral after the invasion. The layout of the Old Minster has been excavated and now the ground plan, with its apsidal east end can be traced immediately to the north. Inside the Norman cathedral, the old kings' remains were placed in mortuary chests in the 1520s, some of which were destroyed by Cromwell's vandals.

In addition to the original Anglo-Saxon Minsters, a convent was also founded by Alfred's widow, Ealhswith. In the 960's, the Old Minster was reformed and became the Priory of St. Swithun, which survived until Henry VIII's Dissolution. A hundred years later, however, the Saxon Bishop Stigand was replaced by the Norman Walkelin and here, as elsewhere, the Normans' energy and desire to dominate the native culture, led to a new stone cathedral in the Romanesque style, elements of which survive later alterations, chiefly the atmospheric crypt, with its modern statue by Antony Gormley (of Angel of the North fame) and the North and South Transepts.



The light coloured stone which gives Winchester its characteristic bright air, was brought from the nearby Isle of Wight and the new cathedral was consecrated in 1093. St. Swithun's relics were brought into the new church on his feast day, the 15th of July and the old Saxon Minster's demolition commenced the very next day. At the time, Winchester was the longest cathedral in the world, at 535ft. The West front was originally 40ft further out.

Perhaps partly due to the haste with which it was constructed, but rumoured at the time to be because of the burial inside of the uncivilised King William II, the Norman building experienced early problems, with the central tower collapsing in 1107. By the middle of the twelfth century, with rebuilding underway, Bishop Henry of Blois, brother to the troubled King Stephen, altered the east end around the relics of St. Swithun, including the 'Holy Hole' where pilgrims could crawl underneath the relics to gain better access to their miraculous nature. Although later remodelled in the 1470's, the shrine remained at the centre of the church until Henry's destruction of such sites in the 1538. Other treasures dating from the twelfth century include the carved Baptismal font with its gorgeously bold narrative carvings of the life of St. Nicholas and also the delightful and rare wall paintings in the Holy Sepulchre Chapel to the north of the Choir. The surviving fragments depict in colourful detail the Deposition from the Cross, the Entombment and Christ in Majesty.

SIR ROBERT BEAUMONT AND ISABEL VERMANDOIS
THEIR CHILDREN
GEN. II

governor thereof, as also sheriff, and the king's farmer there), subjecting it wholly to himself; and by this means, being made an earl in England, exceeded all nobles of the realm in riches and power." He married in 1096 Isabel Vermandois, daughter of Hugh de Vermandois, Earl of Vermandois. Her ancestral genealogy is covered in Volume I. They had the following children:

  - 1. Emma Bellomont, born in 1102.
  - 2. Waleran de Bellomont, a twin brother, born 1104, who succeeded to the Earldom of Mellent, in Normandy.
  - 3. Robert de Bellomont, a twin brother, born 1104, successor to the English Earldom. See below.
  - 4. Hugh de Bellomont, surnamed Pauper (the Poor), obtained the Earldom of Bedford from King Stephen, with the daughter of Milo de Beauchamp, upon the expulsion of the said Milo. Being a person remiss and negligent himself he fell from the dignity of an earl to the state of a knight; and in the end to miserable poverty.
  - 5. Elizabeth Bellomont. a concubine to Henry I., and afterwards wife of Gilbert Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke.
  - 5. Adeline Bellomont, married Hugh de Montfort.
  - 6. Amicia Bellomont, married Hugh de Novo Castello.
  - 7. Albreda Bellomont, married William Lupellus, or Lovel.

  This great earl is characterized as "the wisest of all men betwixt this and Jerusalem, in worldly affairs; famous for knowledge, plausible in speech, skillful in craft, discreetly provident, ingeniously subtle, excelling for prudence, profound in council, and of great wisdom." In the latter days of his life he became a monk in the abbey of Preaux, where he died in 1118, and was succeeded in the Earldom of Leicester by his 2nd son, Robert.

- 2. Robert (Called Bossu) de Bellomont, 2nd Earl of Leicester, adhering to King Henry I. upon all occasions, was with that monarch at his decease in 1135, and he afterwards as staunchly supported the interests of his grandson, Henry II., upon whose accession to the throne, he was constituted Justice of England. He married (1) Godehilde, daughter of Raoul de Toeni II., who bore him no children, and from whom he was separated by 1090. When between fifty or sixty years of age, he married (2) Lady Elizabeth, according to Crispin and Macary, and she, being young, was won over by William de Warren II., Earl of Warren and Surrey, so that she finally deserted him. Another source, Wurts, has him marrying (2) Amicia Waer (Ware). daughter of Ralph de Waer (Ware), Earl of Norfolk, by whom he had a son and two daughters as follows:

  - 1. Robert de Bellomont. See below.
  - 2. __________, the wife of Simon, Earl of Huntingdon.
  - 3. __________, the wife of William, Earl of Gloucester.

8. Bellomont Line (Earls of Leicester)

The following is from Crispin and Macary, pg. 87:

"Wace records "Rogier li veil cil de Belmont," but in the manuscript in the British Museum the name is Robert, which is correct, since Roger remained in Normandy at the head of the council to assist Queen Matilda in the government of that duchy. Roger is conceded to have been the wealthiest, noblest, and most trusted of the seigniors of Normandy. He was the son of Humphrey de Viellers, grandson of Thurold de Pontaudemer, a descendant of the kings of Denmark, through Bernard the Dane, the companion of Duke Rollo the Dane. Lofty as was his ancestry, he adopted the title of the family of his wife, Adelina, Countess of Meulent, Meulant, Mellent, later Meulan used by his posterity. He contributed sixty vessels to the fleet of Duke William and was represented at Senlac by his son Robert, whom William of Poitiers and Oderic Vital state was "a novice in arms." Robert was rewarded with ninety manors in Warwick, Leicester, Wilts, and also Northampton. He and his brother Henry, afterwards Earl of Warwick, were among the barons who reconciled King William and his son, Duke Robert Curthose, in 1081. He was known after the death of his mother as Count of Meulent and as such in 1082 sat in the French Parliament, as a peer of France. With his brother, he espoused the cause of King William Rufus and after his death that of King Henry, by whom he was created Earl of Leicester. He married Elizabeth Vermandois, daughter of the Count of Vermandois, and he had issue: Emma, born 1102; Waleran and Robert, twins, born 1104; and Hugh the Poor, afterwards Earl of Bedford, and the following other daughters, Adeline, Amicia, Albreda, and Isabel. Robert de Beaumont married Godehilde, daughter of Raoul de Toeni (Toni) II, who bore him no children and from whom he was separated by 1090. When between fifty and sixty, he married secondly Lady Elizabeth, who was young, and William de Warren II, Earl of Warren and Surrey, supplanted Robert in her affections, so that she ultimately deserted him, which affected his mind and hurried him to his death in 1118."

CHILDREN OF ROBERT BEAUMONT + PETRONELLA GEN. 13.

houses, died in 1167, after having lived for fifteen years a canon regular in the abbey of Leicester, and was succeeded by his son, Robert.

- *13 3. Robert (surnamed Blanchmaines, from having white hands) de Bellomont, 3rd Earl of Leicester, adhering to Prince Henry, in the 19th year of King Henry II., in his rebellion, incurred the high displeasure of that monarch. The king commanding that his town of Leicester should be laid to waste, it was besieged, and the greater part burnt; the inhabitants having permission for 300 pounds to move whither they pleased. He was received however in royal favor in four years afterwards (1177), and had restoration of all his lands and castles, save the castle of Montsorel, in the co. of Leicester, and Pacey in Normandy; but surviving King Henry, he stood in such favor with Richard I., that those castles were likewise restored to him, and he was appointed to carry one of the swords of state at that monarch's coronation. He married Petronella Grantmesnil, daughter of Hugh de Grantmesnil, with whom he had the whole honor of Hinkley, and stewardship of England. They had the following children:

    - 1. Robert (surnamed FitzParnel from his mother), 4th Earl of Leicester, succeeded his father in Messina in 1191, being invested by King Richard with the cincture of a sword. After which, while his master was detained in captivity by the emperor, the King of France having invaded Normandy, and taken divers places, this earl coming to Roan, excited the inhabitants to so vigorous a defense, that the French monarch was obliged to retreat. Furthermore, it is related of him, that making a pilgrimage into the Holy Land, he there unhorsed and slew the Soldan in a tournament, when returning into England, he died in 1204, and was buried at the abbey of Leicester. He had married Laureeta, daughter of William de Braose, Lord Braose, of Brember, but having no issue, the Earldom of Leicester became extinct, while his great inheritance devolved upon his two sisters as co-heirs.

    - 2. Roger de Bellomont, Bishop of St. Andrews, in Scotland.

    - 3. William de Bellomont, founder of the hospital of St. Leonards, at Leicester.

    - 4. Amicia Bellomont, married Simon de Montfort, who after the earldom of Leicester expired, with the male line of the Bellomonts, at the decease of Robert FitzParnel, had one moeity of the earldom of Leicester, with the honor of Hinkley, and was created Earl of Leicester by King John. He also enjoyed the stewardship of England, as in right of the said honor of Hinkley.

    - 5. Margaret Bellomont. See below.

- *14. 4. Margaret Bellomont, married Saier de Quincy., who at the decease of Robert FitzParnel, had the other moiety of the earldom of Leicester, and was shortly after created Earl of Winchester by King John.

[18, 19, 20, 21, 22]
Langston & Buck show as brother of Saher IV de Quincy, whereas Weis shows him as son.
Weis, in "Magna Charta Sureties", explains:
Sidney Painter, "The House of Quency, 1134-1264" in Medieval et Humanistica XI 3-9, also his Feudalism and Liberty, pp. 230-239 provide evidences and reasoning to indicate that Robert was a younger brother, not son, of Saier de Quincy, 1st Earl of Winchester, and Magna Charta Surety. However, see The Genealogist, vol. 5, pp. 221-225, for evidence that the original identification of Robert as son of Saier was correct after all. [21, 18, 23]
Child:

+ 12 i. MARGARET^5, b. in 1208 in Lincoln, Lincolnshire, England, d. in 1258 in Clerkenwell, England; m. (NZ-5) JOHN DE LACY in 1223.

General Notes:

Saier's marriage to his wife, Margaret De Beaumont, ultimately made him very wealthy. When Margaret's only brother, Robert Fitz-Pernel, died in 1204, she became his heiress and Saier succeeded to a part of Robert's vast estates in Leicester and Grandmesnil. Saier was the royal Justice in many counties and King John "Lackland" Plantagenet made him the first Earl of Winchester in 1210. King John's reign was a difficult one and the barons were very unhappy with the state of affairs. Saire joined the barons' rebellion against King John. The rebel barons, including Saier, went to Paris in 1216 to talk to King Louis VIII of France. They offered Louis the throne of England if he would help them in their cause against King John. Louis agreed and led an expedition to England. Saier was a principal commander in Louis' fight; however, they were defeated at the Battle of Lincoln and Louis returned to France. Saier's lands were seized for his part in the rebellion and he was taken prisoner by the royalists. King John had died in 1216., and now, Saier submitted to the rule of John's son, King Henry III, and all of Saier's lands were restored to him. In 1218, he went to the Holy Land but shortly after his arrival, he became ill and died.

MISC: Earl of Wincester, Magna Carta Surety, 1215, Crusader 1219 (son of Robert de Quincy, d . ca. 1198), Lord of Buckley and of Fawside, Crusader; m. Orabella, dau. of Ness; and grandso n of Maud de St. Liz by her 2nd husb., Saher de Quincy of Buckley and Daventry. He was a Baron present at Lincoln when WILLIAM the Lion of Scotland did homage to the English monarch in October 1200. He obtained large grants and immunities form King JOHN and was created Earl of Winchester on 2 Mar 1207, having been governor in 1203 of the Castle of Ruil in Normandy. He is credited with rewriting the Magna Charta from the Charts of King HENRY I and the Saxon Code . Because he had opposed the King's concession to Pope's legate, he was bitterly hated by King JOHN. One of the Barons to whom the City and Tower of London were resigned, SAIRE was excommunicated with the other Barons the following year. He was sent, with ROBERT FITZWALTER, the Surety, by the other Barons, to invite the Dauphin of France to assume the Crown of England and, even after the death of King JOHN, he kept a strong garrison in Montsorell Castle in behalf of Prince LOUIS. When the Barons, being greatly outnumbered, were defeated by the troops of King HENRY III, SAIRE was made prisoner and his estates were forfeited. In the following October his immense estates were restored upon his submission. In 1218 the Earl of Winchester went with the Earls of Chester and Arundel to the Holy Land, assisted at the siege of Damietta in 1219, and died on 3 Nov of the same year, on the way to Jerusalem.

SAIRE is associated with two stalwart Castles in the South of England: Colchester and Winchester, both with the Latin "castrum" root, signifying that they were once the sites of Roman forts. Colchester was the largest Norman keep in England. It measures one hundred fifty-two by one hundred seventeeen feet, enclosing nearly twice the area of the Tower of London. Its walls vary between eleven and thirty feet in thickness. Winchester Castle was first erected by WILLIAM the Conqueror with later alterations by HENRY III.

Earl of Manchester and signer of the Magna Charta. When the baronial war brok e out, his lordship's pennant waved on the side of freedom and he became so eminent amongst those sturdy chiefs that he was chosen one of the celebrated twenty-five barons appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Carta. Adhering to the same party after the accession of Henry III, the Earl of Winchester had a principal command at the battle of Lincoln and, there being defeated, was taken prisoner by the royalists. But submitting in the following October, he had restitution of all his lands and proceeded soon after, in company with the Earls of Chester and Arundel and others of the nobility, to the Holy Land where he assisted at the sieg e of Damietta, anno 1219, and d. the same year in his progress towards Jerusalem.

[Sir Bernard Burke, Dormant, Abeyant, Forfeited and Extinct Peerages, Burke's Peerage, Ltd. , London, England, 1883, p. 447, Quincy, Earls of Winchester]

Saire de Quincy was born before 1154. He was the Joint Governor of Normandy 1180-1184. He was the Steward of England 1205-1207. He was created Earl of Winchester, by King John in 1207. He was present at Lincoln, when William, King of Scotland, did homage to the English monarch, and he subsequently obtained large grants and immunities from King John; when, however, the baronial war broke out, his pennant waved on the side of freedom, and he became so eminent among the chiefs, that he was chosen one of the twenty-five barons, a Surety, appointed to enforce the observance of the Magna Charta, in 1215. Adhering to the same party, after the accession of King Henry III, the Earl of Winchester had a principal command at the battle of Lincoln, and there being defeated, he was taken prisoner by the royalists. But submitting in the following October, he had restitution of all his lands; and proceeded soon after in company with the Earls of Chester and Arundel, and others of the nobility, to the Holy Land. A leader of the First Crusade, he assisted at the siege of Damietta, in 1219, and died in the Holy Land on November 3, 1219, progressing toward Jerusalem. He married Margaret Bellomont (Beaumont), granddaughter of Isabel Vermandois and great granddaughter of Hugh Magnus of France. She was sister and co-heir of Richard Fitz Parnell, Earl of Leicester, by which alliance her husband Saire de Quincy acquired a very considerable inheritance.

Saier married Margaret DE BEAUMONT, daughter of 3rd Earl Of Leicester Robert III DE BEAUMONT and Petronilla DE GRENTEMESNIL. (Margaret DE BEAUMONT was born about 1149 in Hampshire, England and died on 12 Jan 1232-1233.)

GEN. 15.

★ 15. Roger de QUINCY 2nd Earl of Winchester [Parents] [1, 2, 3] was born 1195 in of Winchester, Hampshire, England. He died [4, 5] 25 Apr 1264 in , , , England. Roger married [6] Helen Mcdonal of GALLOWAY about 1221.

> ROGERL DE QUINCY, Earl of Winchester, died without male issue 25 April 1264, and was probably buried at Brackley, Leicestershire, his Earldom reverting to the Crown.
> He married first HELEN OF GALLOWAY, second but first surviving daughter and coheir of Alan, Lord of Galloway, Constable of Scotland, who died in 1234. Helen died after 21 Nov. 1245 and was buried at Brackley.
> He married second, before 5 June 1250, Maud de Bohun, widow of Anselm Marshal, Earl of Pembroke, who died in Dec. 1245, and daughter of Humphrey de Bohun, by Maud, daughter of Raoul (Ralph) de Lusignan, Count of Eu. The younger Maud was not very old when she died without issue in Grosby, Leicestershire, 20 Oct. 1252 and was buried at Brackley.
> He married third, without license, before 5 Dec. 1252, Eleanor (or Alianole) de Ferrers, widow of William de Vaux (who had died without issue shortly before 14 Sept. 1252), and seventh daughter of William de Ferrers, 5th Earl of Derby, by his first wife, Sybil (of whom Eleanor was coheir). His widow was assigned dower 21 Sept. 1264, and married third, before 8 Sept. 1267, as his second wife, Roger de Leyburn, who died about Oct. 1271. She died shortly before 26 Oct. 1274, and was buried at Leeds Priory.
> He was apparently on Crusade at Damietta in the Holy Land when his father died, and inherited his father's lands 16 Feb 1220/1. Upon his mother's death in 1234/5 he was recognized as the Earl of Winchester. He traveled with his mother's knights to Brittany in the spring and summer of 1230.
> By rights inherited through his first wife he became hereditary Constable of Scotland in 1234. He needed the help of the Scottish king to quash a rebellion against his tyrannical rule of his lands there in 1247. He had witnessed an agreement between Alexander of Scotland and Henry III on 25 Sept. 1237, served in Gascony in 1242, against the Welsh in 1258, 1260, 1261 and 1263, and was an arbitrator between the King of Scotland and Henry III in 1257/8. He took up arms for Henry Ill in 1260, 1261 and 1263.
> Children, by first wife, the first three listed by Cokayne: > i. Margaret, d. 1280/1; m. c. 1238 William0 de Ferrers, Earl of Derby; she resigned her hereditary office as Constable of Scotland in favor of her brother-in-law, the 6th Earl of Buchan, in 1270.
> ii. Elizabeth (or Isabel), m. Alexander Comyn, 6th Earl of Buchnn and Constable of Scotland.
> iii. Helen (or Ellen, Elene [Elena in Weis, AR7, 53:29]), d. 1296; m. Sir Alan Ia Zouche, of Ashby-de-la-Zouche, who d. 10 August 1270.
> iv. Isabel, b. c. 1224 [Norr, 100]; was to m. 1241 Hugh Neville (at this time the names Isabel and Elizabeth were essentially the same, and this could be a reference to Elizabeth, above).

★ 15. Helen Mcdonal of GALLOWAY [1, 2, 3] died [4] after 21 Nov 1245 in Brackley, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. She married [5] Roger de QUINCY 2nd Earl of Winchester about 1221.

They had the following children:

F i Elena de QUINCY was born 1222 and died before 20 Aug 1296.

Notes: third son of Thomas De Berkley, by his wife, dau. of William De Ferrers Earl of Derby. When the news reached Exeter that Bishop Walter Stapeldon had fallen a victim to the popular phrensy in London, the dean and chapter assembled to deliberate on a suitable successor. Their choice was unanimous in favour of their colleague James Berkeley. For the last eight years he had been also Archdeacon of Huntingdon, and was powerful by his family connections. The royal assent was given to the election on 12 Dec 1326, and six days later the King addressed a letter from Kenilworth to Pope John XXII, extolling the elect for pre-eminence of merit, noble descent, learning, and circumspection, and praying that no obstacle might be opposed to his consecration. To the cardinals individually the King on the same day addressed letters to the same purpose (Rymer's 'Foedera,' tom. .iv. p. 240). The Sir John - Only in 1432 with the succession of John de Sutton VI did the barony come to prominence for he had a long and successful career in the service of the royal court. Amongst his many appointments he held the lieutenancy of Ireland. In the Wars of the Roses he supported the Lancasterian faction under Henry VI and was imprisoned at Ludlow Castle.

In 1455 he was captured at the battle of St Albans and again imprisoned. Despite his previous loyalty to the Lancastrian cause he was soon employed on diplomatic missions for the Yorkists acting as ambassador in negotiations with Burgundy and Brittany.

John de Sutton VI survived the slaughter of these wars and died in 1487 after a long and most distinguished career.

As Lord Steward in 1422 he brought home the body of King Henry V to England, and was chief mourner and carried the standard of King Henry V at his funeral. he fought throughout the wars with France and was a firm supporter of the House of Lancaster in the Wars of the Roses. He was summoned to Parliament from 15 Feb 1439/40 by writs directed Johanni de Sutton de Duddeley militi, whereby he is held to have become Lord Dudley. He was the first of his family to adopt the surname of Dudley as an alias for Sutton. He was taken prisoner with King Henry VI on 23 May 1455 at the first Battle of St. Albans, and was wounded at Blore Heath on 23 Sep 1459.

John SUTTON

(1st B. Sutton of Dudley)

Born: 25 Dec 1400, Dudley Castle, Staffordshire, England

Died: 30 Sep 1487, Staffordshire, England

Buried: St. James Priory, Dudley, Staffordshire, England

Notes: Knight of the Garter.

Father: John SUTTON

Mother: Constance BLOUNT

Married: Elizabeth BERKELEY (B. Powis/B. Dudley) ABT 1420, Dudley, Staffordshire, England

Children:

1. Catherine SUTTON
2. Edmund SUTTON (Sir)
3. John SUTTON of Atherington (Esq.)
4. Margaret SUTTON
5. William SUTTON (Bishop of Durham)
6. Jane SUTTON
7. Oliver SUTTON (Sir Knight)
8. Eleanor SUTTON

Knight of the Garter. 1428 Treasurer of the King's household. 26 Sep 1439 Summoned to Parliament as Baron Dudley.

According to Ormerod's (Hist. Cheshire), Stow, Dugdale, etc. The first of the Sutton Dudley family, that is worthy of a particular notice is John Sutton, lord Dudley (sixth in descent from Richard and Isabella), who had the honor of bearing the standard at the funeral of King Henry V, 1422. He was 2 years Lord Lieut. of Ireland, being appointed Jan 1428, in which employment and other services, his merit was so conspicuous, that, in 1439, he had summons to parliament then held at Reading, and the same year was appointed one of the commissioners to treat with the Duke of Burgundy upon a truce.

In 1446, being of the King's Council, he was sent Ambassador, with the Bishop of Chichester, to the Duke of Britanny, and on another embassy to the Duke of Burgundy.

In 1447, in consideration of his services, he received a grant of an annuity of one hundred pounds issuing out of the customs of the port of London. Being surprised and taken by Richard, Duke of York, at Gloucester, on his return from Ireland in 1451, he was sent to prison at the castle of Ludlow. Soon afterwards he fought in the battle of Bloreheath, 1459, and, being wounded, received thereupon, and for other services, honorable trusts and offices from his Sovereign and grants of more than œ200 per annum for life. Henry VI also appointed him treasurer of his household, and he was, in 1460, elected a knight of the most noble Order of the Garter. We are not told how long he remained in prison, but the House of Commons being mostly Yorkists, prayed the King to remove Sir John Sutton and some other noted persons from among them and exclude Sutton forever from his royal counsels, and ever to prohibit him from approaching within twelve miles of the court. But Henry VI refused the petition. Lord Dudley fought at the battle of St. Albans, May 23, 1455, where the King was defeated by the Duke of York and taken prisoner. Dudley was also taken a prisoner of war and sent to the Tower of London; but he was soon released, as peace prevailed shortly afterwards. He still, however, persevered in the Lancastrian cause for Henry VI. Leland, the noted antiquary, thus describes that action: "At Bloreheath, was a field fought between the Earl of Salisbury and northern men on King Edward's part, who overcame the lords Audley (slain) and Dudley (wounded) with Queen Margaret and Chestershire men, who lost the field". Lord Dudley was one of the knights taken prisoner. By singular good fortune he was equally honored in the next reign by Edward IV, who granted Lord Dudley a pardon in his first year from all debts upon accounts due for him in the exercise of his office, and, afterwards, another grant of one hundred marks yearly to issue from the Duchy of Cornwall, and lastly, one hundred pounds per annum from customs of the port of Southampton. In the 17th of King Edward IV, he was employed as a Commissioner, with his brother-in-law, the Earl of Arundel, who had married Dudley's wife's sister, (Eleanor Berkeley) to treat respecting the prorogation of the truce between France and England.

In the Register of the Order of the Garter, it is recorded, that, in 1461, Lord Dudley had the stall of the deceased Earl of Longueville. There were then only 12 companions. In 1472, there were 17 members. In 1486, there were 23; and in 1477, 25. It is recorded that Lord Dudley died Sep 1487.-Anstis' Order of the Garter.

Dugdale says, "he was faithful to King Henry VI, yet he did so comply with King Edward IV, when he obtained the crown, that he received many great favors and rewards from that new Sovereign". Edward V, also added to his honors, by appointing him to hold the Feast of St. George at Windsor, on the 4th of May, 1483, the day his coronation was to take place. But as soon as Edward V was suppressed, Lord Dudley attended a chapter of the Order of the Garter in Richard III's palace, at Westminster, in the first year of that King (1483), and obtained from him a grant of eight manors "for his faithtul service in favoring his title to the crown". He fought on Richard III's side at the Battle of Bosworth.

Henry VII revoked his grant, or prevented it from taking effect. However, Lord Dudley had from Henry VII 1000 marks and the manors of Northfield and Wiley, in Worcestershire, besides a full pardon; and created him Sheriff of Sussex. This Lord Kt. must have been a man, whose good will was valuable to all sorts of kings.

Probably few warriors, like him, of the great Henry V, had survived through the war of the Roses, and it is no wonder he should have become as he did, the origin of the noted historical houses by the name of Dudley.

His will, dated 17 Aug 1487, directed that he should be buried at the Priory of St. James, in Dudley, in a tomb to cost not over £20.

This Sir John Dudley was a great financier and diplomatist, if we are to judge by his success in those directions; for he not only acquired great honors, and offices and estates, but he married his children to heirs and heiresses of the great and wealthy houses of England, thereby preparing the way for their future renown, which far surpassed that of their noble ancestors, distinguished though they were. All this can be seen in the pedigrees and biographical sketches of this history.

Bio for Charlemagne

Charlemagne, or Charles the Great, was the son of a Frankish King. After inheriting his father's throne, Charlemagne was converted to Christianity. Encouraged by the Pope to spread his religion, he began a series of military conquests which were to lead to the formation the Holy Roman Empire. Charlemagne's father was Pepin III, a King ofthe Franks, who was also known as Pepin the Short. When Peppin died in 768, his kingdom was inherited jointly by his two sons. However, Charlemagne's brother, Carloman, died just three years later, leaving Charlemagne the sole ruler. Shortly afterward, Charlemagne began an extended military campaign designed to conquer neighboring territories and to convert them to Christianity. These were waged against the Saxons to the north (from 772 to 777) and the Lombards to the south (in 773). In 778 , Charlemagne began a drive into Spain to conquer the Moors, but he withdrew when some of the German tribes hehad recently overcome revolted. Charlemagne spent the next seven years quelling various uprisings which finally ended with the surrender and baptism of the Saxon's Chief. Charlemagne there upon resumed his efforts at conquest and was able to subdue Bohemia, portions of northern Spain, and the Kingdom of the Avars (now Hungary). It was at this point that Pope Leo III asked Charlemagne to subdue an uprising of the Roman tribes. To reward Charlemagne for his success, the Pope crowned him Emperor Carolus Augustus in 800. To consolidate his rule, Charlemagne established a capital at Aachen (now Aix-la-Chapelle in France). In addition to a palace, he built a large university, and spent the remainder of his reign promoting education and the arts. He also established a stable government and initiated good relations with other countries. However, his efforts to establish a government based on Christian principles did not survive much beyond his death since his sons were unable to maintain his authority, and the empire soon disintegrated.

them from the Pects and Scots in the fifth century.Others found refuge across the channel in northwestern France, which henceforth has been known as "Brittany" and adjoins the province of "Normandy"established by the "Norsemen" about the same period. Therefore the tradition finds plausabel verification in the return, under the banners of William the Conqueror, of Sir Abell to repossess his own. Even a brother of Harold had allied himself with another invader direct from the "Northlands" paying with their lives at Stamford Bridge only a month before Hastings.Robert Abell, Exquire, was living in Bryslingcote, County Derby, in 1517. He was servant or tenant of Sir William Gresley. His grandson, George Abell, of Leicestershire, in 1578 matriculated at Brasenose College University of Oxford.He appears to have been a member of a branch which flourished in the central counties during the 16th and 17th centuries in which the names of Robert andGeorge predominted/ But our soty story digresses from the English lines in 1630 when Robert, 2nd son of George Abell of Leicestershire set sail in the fleet under Governor Winthrop for Massechusetts Bay.His father's will made in September of the same year "cut him off" with a"twenty shilling piece", in view of having set him up in business in London of which he had made no use and more recently of having outfitted him for New England with the hope of his safe arrival.No doubt George Abell had passed on before such a message could have been received in those days. The first American record finds Robert Abell inWeymouth, Massechusetts, where on 19 October 1630, his name appears on apetition, with others, to be made a "Freeman on 18 May 1631. This act endoued him with privileges and responsibilities of citizenship in the new colony,including ownership of lands, in the exercise of which he continued to acquire holdings, especially after his removal in 1643 to Rehoboth, a new settlement on the south side of the peninsual begun in 1642 by a party of colonists under the Revernd Samuel Newman, a minister at Weymouth for five years preceeding.Robert Abell purchased the allotment first sold to Job Lane. His name appears frequently in public records up to the time of his death in 1663, including two appointments as keeper of the "Ordinary", from all of which it is reasonably tobe assumed that he attained a position of considerable importance and was heldin high esteem by his associates in the colony. In Connection with the inventory of his estate, administered by his widow Joanna, is mentioned his"eldest son" to whom was bequeathed the homestead, his "daughter Mary" and"five other children". His widow Joanna married William Hyde in 1667, and with her second husband moved to Norwich, Connecticut.Roberts eldest son, Preserved Abell, remained in Rehoboth, and his three other sons went to Norwich with their mother.Probably all of the present day Abells of New England stock are descendants of Robert's three sons, Preserved, Caleb and Benjamin Abell. His fourth son Joshua, did not leave any male descendants.p.37The Line of Charlemagne32. Charlemagne (Charles I), K of the Franks and Roman Empire, md the SwabianPrincess, Hildegarde of Savoy31. Robert was born in England and died in Rehoboth, Massechusetts, son of Georgeand Frances abell of Hemington, Leicestershire, England, married Joanna ...,probably in England.The first record of Robert in America is at Weymouth, Massechusetts, includedin a list as desirous to be mad a Freeman, 19 October 1630, and he took theoath of Freeman 18 May 1631. He is mentioned at the Quarterly Court, held atBoston 4 December 1638 and 2 Jun 1640 at Weymouth he is mentioned in regards toland owned by John Pfussel, John Stabel and James Snooke, 26 October 1642 to 21May 1644.Robert removed from Weymouth in 1643, probably following Rev. Samuel Newman,the real founder of Rehoboth. Rev. Newman was a minister at Weymouth for fourand a half or five years, then with a majority of his congregation, in 1642removed to a place called by the Indians, Seekonk, to which he gave the name ofReholboth.The first meeting of the original planters of Rehoboth to be found on record isdated at "Weimoth" the 24 of the 8th month (October) 1643. About the year 1643a joint agreement was made by
